MAY USE CENTRE COUNTY FARMS FOR BIG PRISON

Warden Francies, of Western Penitentiary, Makes Visit Here.

RETURN TRIP PLANNED

Has Been Designated by State Prison Board to Recommend Site for New Penitentiary and Farm Prison—Wants About 3000 Acres.

Centre county may be chosen for the site for the proposed new penitentiary and farm prison, to be built by the State, and in which will be confined the inmates of the western penitentiary, at Pittsburg, and the eastern penitentiary, at Philadelphia. John Francies, of Pittsburg, warden of the western penitentiary, on Saturday, last, visited Centre County and personally inspected a number of farms to ascertain whether a desirable location could be secured in this section.

Just what farms were inspected by Mr. Francies was not revealed. So far as may be learned he saw nobody but J. Linn Harris, recently appointed a member of the State Forestry Reserve Commission. In an automobile Mr. Francies and Mr. Harris spent the greater part of the day visiting various parts of the county. Mr. Francies departed without making known the object of his visit. Mr. Harris declined to say anything about the matter. In fact he would neitner confirm nor deny that he had seen Mr. Francies or that he was aware of the latter's mission here.

The State will purchase about 3000 acres of land as a site for the proposed penitentiary and farm prison. Aside from overcoming the congestion in the eastern and western penitentiaries the chief object of the proposed new prison is to afford inmates an opportunity along industrial lines. Mr. Francies, since becoming warden of the western penitentiary, has strongly advocated the advisability of caring for the mental and physical condition of prisoners while serving their sentences and thus improving their chances for becoming useful when discharged. In this he has been warmly supported by Governor Tener and also the State boards of prison inspectors. He has been delegated to visit various sections of the State and ascertain which locality offers the most desirable site for the proposed new prison.

Mr. Francies has already visited several sections of the State. It is not improbable that he will return to Centre County for a second tour of inspection before reporting to Governor Tener as to which section seems best adapted for the purpose in view. Advices from some of the sections visited show that the State has adopted a plan of its own in the matter of purchasing the site for the proposed prison. The State makes a first-hand, direct inquiry of the owner as to the price asked per u acre for land. There is no attempt made to haggle over prices, no effort put forth to prompt the owner to agree to a lower price. The State officials are fully posted on the selling valuations of lands in every county and are thus able to determine instantly whether the owners of lands in any section are asking a price higher than would be placed were the proposed purchaser a private citizen. If the site is desirable and the price asked for the land is in keeping with prices submitted to individuals, as based on past sales in the locality in question, the State makes the purchase then and there. Once a price is given to the State, and it is found to be exhorbitant, the owner of the land is not afforded an opportunity to reduce the amount asked per acre.

Had Foot Amputated.

Friends of William Quick, of Moshannon, will learn with regret of a most unfortunate accident in which he last week had a foot crushed by a freight car. He was removed to the Lock Haven hospital, where it was found that amputation was necessary to save his life. The accident happened on Saturday. Young Quick had been to Snow Shoe to see a baseball game. He attempted to board a moving freight train, missed his footing and one leg was drawn under the car wheels.

Howard Girl a Bride.

On Thursday evening of last week, at the United Brethren church parsonage in Bellefonte, Rev. C. W. Winey united in the holy bonds of wedlock Miss Mary Mann, of Howard, and Fillmore R. Hoy, of Pleasant Gap. The bride is an estimable young lady and is popular with a host of friends. The groom is an industrious young man and his many friends wish him the greatest happiness in his married life.

MEYER GIVES UP JOB WETZEL NEW ENGINEER

Bellefonte Council Elects County Surveyor to Vacancy.

JAB AT TOM. MITCHELL

Board of Auditors Surcharge Council and Threaten Suit to Recover $330 Recently Paid Borough Solicitor for Extra Services.

After serving but a few months Borough Engineer W. D. Meyer last week gave up his position to accept employment as an inspector on State highway work. with headquarters at Hollidaysburg. Bellefonte Council, at its meeting on Monday evening, elected J. Henry Wetzel, of this place, to succeed Mr. Meyer and to serve out the latter's term, or to January 1, next.

There were several applicants for appointment as water superintendent. Mr. Wetzel was the only applicant for borough engineer. Those asking appointment as water superintendent were Thomas C. Caldwell, Todd Ryan and C. F. Tate. Council decided, however, to continue the former system whereby the borough engineer is the head of the bureaus of water, streets, etc., and Mr. Wetzel was accordingly given the place. His salary will be the same as was paid to Mr. Meyer, namely, $100 per mouth.

Aside from this the most interesting feature of the proceedings of Monday evening's meeting was the receipt of a letter from two of the three members of the board of borough auditors refusing to approve the recent action of Council in paying J. Thomas Mitchell, borough solicitor, something like $330 for extra legal services and traveling expenses. A question of law is involved in the matter and it may go before the courts. Auditors W. Miles Walker and Charles A. Lukenbach signed the letter, which notified Council that the payment to Mr. Mitchell would not be allowed and that unless Council should adjust the matter within five days counsel would be engaged to bring suit to recover. Auditor John Curtin did not sign the letter. Mr. Curtin, however, last night called at "The Republican" office and stated that the only reason he had not signed the letter was that he happened to be out of town. He said that he desired it announced that he was in accord with his Democratic calleagues on the board.

The facts in the case, as stated by members of Council, are these: Council engaged Mr. Mitchell as borough solicitor, at a salary of $100 and also payment for any extra legal service that he might perform. Some months ago the Street Committee of Council was directed by Council to take such steps as might be necessary to adjust certain differences that had arisen between the borough and the State Health Department at Harrisburg. As we understand the case, Mr. Mitchell was authorized by the Street Committee to visit Harrisburg and adjust the differences. He was also authorized to visit Philadelphia and conduct certain negotiations in regard to the Green mill property, at Milesburg. He subsequently rendered to Council a bill amounting to something like $330, which was ordered paid. Several members of Council opposed the bill, questioning its legality and holding to the belief that it was excessive. A majority of the members voted in its favor and the bill was accordngly paid.

Auditors Walker, Curtin and Lukenbach, in going over the borough accounts for the year, rejected the Mitchell item in question, raising the point that Council had no legal authority to pay Mr. Mitchell for extra services and also contending that his charge of $15 a day for services and $20 a day for expenses was excessive. In the discussion that followed the receipt of the letter it was explained that it was a matter for the courts to determine, there being some similarity between the law governing the selection of borough solicitors and that regulating the engaging of county solicitors. The Supreme Court has ruled that a county solicitor may not be paid for extra services. It was contended that the Supreme Court has never ruled on the legality of payment to borough solicitors for extra services, especially where a contract covering extra service payment is in existence.

Council, after some deliberation, concluded to allow the five days specified by Auditors Walker and Lukenbach to lapse and have the matter properly adjudicated by the courts. Should it be held that Council is liable for the $330 paid to Mr. Mitchell the latter will be called upon to reimburse the borough to that amount.

Contractor R. B. Taylor presented to Council a bill for upward of $4,000 as the

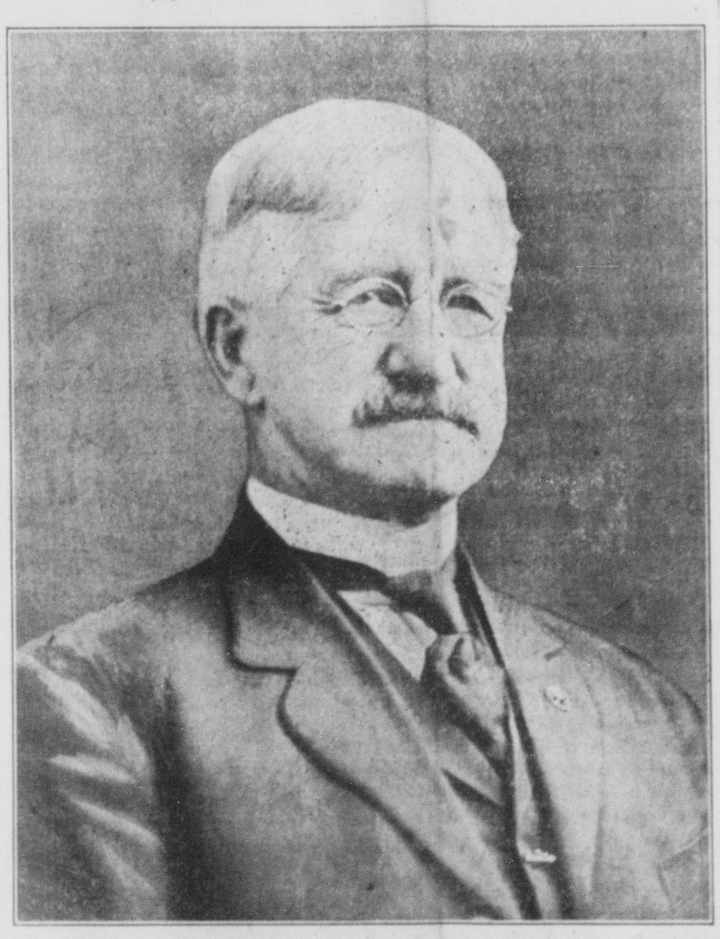
Captain Samuel H. Williams Appointed Bellefonte Postmaster



CAPTAIN S. H. WILLIAMS

President Taft on Saturday appointed Captain Samuel H. Williams as postmaster for Bellefonte. The appointment was sent to the Senate during the day and confirmed on Saturday evening. While Captain Williams has not been advised when he shall assume charge it is probable that he will enter upon the duties of his office on or about September 1. The appointment was made upon the recommendation of Congressman Patton and confirmed in the Senate at the instance of Senator Penrose.

The announcement of the appointment of Captain Williams was received with general approval by the people of Bellefonte. When it had become generally known that he had achieved a life-long ambition, Captain Williams was warmly congratulated. To all he modestly expressed his thanks and voiced a desire to so conduct the Bellefonte post office as to merit the approval of the business men and citizens in general.

Captain Williams has on several occasions been an aspirant for appointment as postmaster, only to have his hopes terminate in disappointment. He is a life-long resident of Bellefonte, is well and favorably known and will enter upon the dutes of his office with the good will and confidence of the community.

STORM DAMAGES FRUIT

Fisher and Reynolds Orchards Suffer Pay Train Conductor Shocked.

The violent wind storm which swept over this section on Friday of last week caused considerable damage, especially in the fruit farms of Col. W. F. Reynolds, near Bellefonte, and D. E. Fisher & Son, at Unionville. The Fisher orchards suffered the greatest damage, upward of 1000 bushels of apples being knocked off the trees. At the Reynolds farms the loss comprised about 100 bushels of apples and probably 200 bushels of peaches.

The Haupt apple orchards, near Bellefonte, escaped with little or no damage, the trees being sheltered by the mountain.

The storm caused more or less damage in other ways. The roof on the George Tibbens barn, on the Jacksonville road, was blown off by the wind and hurled with terrific force against one side of the Tibbens house, badly wrenching it. The roof of the barn on the George Stine property, on Dix Run, was also blown off.

In Bellefonte the storm damage was confined chiefly to the breaking down of shade trees and the shattering of window panes. One of the large and beautiful shade trees along the Spring Street side of the John P. Harris home, was broken off a few inches from the ground. The tree, which was very tall, toppled squarely across the street, blocking traffic there for some time. Examination of the tree revealed that the trunk had become rotted from side to side. This fact had been concealed by the apparently good condition of the bark of the tree. The tree was in heavy foliage and gave every appearance of being good for many years to come. The storm also broke down a shade tree in Curtin Street and tore off branches of trees nearby the Bush House and other points in town.

The storm was especially violent in the Snow Shoe mountains, although the well known Reese orchards at Snow Shoe escaped with little or no damage. The storm in that section was accompanied by a large quantity of hail. The Pennsylvania Railroad pay train happened to reach the top of the Snow Shoe mountain when the storm was at its worst. Conductor Harry Bell, who was in charge of the train, undertook to use a telephone nearby the railroad tracks, and was violently shocked by a stroke of lightning. He was rendered unconscious and it was some time before he was revived.

BUILD PUBLIC MAUSOLEUM

Altoona Syndicate Decides to Build in Bellefonte; Buys Two Lots.

Wilbur A. Rice, representing an Altoona syndicate, this week closed negotiations for the erection of a public mausoleum in Bellefonte. The mausoleum will be located on land adjoining the Union cemetery, facing on East High Street, and will provide for 480 crypts. Mr. Rice while here purchased two lots, on which the mausoleum is to be located. It is a section 50x200 feet.

The estimated cost of the mausoleum, so the cemetery association was informed, is $50,000. The association is to receive $10,000 as an endowment fund for the care of the mausoleum in the future. The Altoona syndicate assumes entire charge of the sale of crypts, the project being one in which the cemetery association has no financial interest.

The proposed mausoleum, in addition to containing 480 crypts, will include a chapel for the holding of funeral services. Work on the mausoleum, it was stated, will be begun not later than October 1.

CENTRAL R. R. ADVANCES ALL PASSENGER RATES

Increases Range From 1 to 18 Cents on Single Fare Each Way.

ABOUT 1 CENT PER MILE

New Schedule Now in Operation—Stated That No Increase in Present Excursion Rates to Hecla Park is Contemplated This Year.

All passenger rates on the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania have been given a hefty boost, the increase ranging from 3 cents in the fare to Nigh Bank, the first station after leaving Bellefonte, to 18 cents on a single fare from Bellefonte to Kriders Siding. The increase amounts to about one cent per mile. The new schedule of rates went into effect with the first of the month.

It is possible that the excursion rate to Hecla Park will be advanced next year. That no increase in the excursion rate to to the popular park is contemplated for the remainder of the present season is stated by the company's agents. The increased excursion amounting to 10 and 5 cents, in force on the occasion of the Business Men's picnic, on Tuesday, apparently proved acceptable to the public, it being estimated by Central Railroad agents that the attendance was upward of 6,000.

The old schedule of passenger fares also the new schedule, together with the increase, follows:

FARMERS' INSTITUTES

Dates Announced for Meetings to be Held in Centre County.

Announcement has been made by the Department of Agriculture, at Harrisburg, of the dates for the holding of farmers' institutes in the several counties in Pennsylvania. The dates and places for meetings in Centre County are as follows:

Eagleville, Monday and Tuesday, December 4 and 5.

Centre Hall, Wednesday and Thursday, December 6 and 7.

Stormstown, Friday and Saturday, December 8 and 9.

The several meetings will be addressed by speakers assigned from Harrisburg.

Bitten by Copperhead.

George Mason, who resides at the corner of Fairview and West Fourth streets, this city, was bitten on the index finger of his right hand by a copperhead snake about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, says the Lock Haven Express. Mr. Mason went into the woodshed to secure some kindling and while picking up a stick felt a sharp pain in his finger. Going to the light he observed a laceration and at once decided that he had been bitten by a snake. After some effort the reptile was located and dispatched in short order. It was found to be a copperhead about three feet in length, which probably crawled into the woodshed from the nearby hills. Making a tourniqeut of a handkerchief Mr. Mason stopped the poison virus from entering his arm. In the meantime Dr. G. D. Green had been hurriedly summoned and he treated the wound. Mr. Mason suffered great pain during the night, but it is thought the evil effects of the poison were arrested by the prompt and efficient treatment.

Injured by Peculiar Accident.

Three persons were painfully injured in a most peculiar accident at Tyrone on Sunday afternoon, last. While a rapidly moving freight train was passing through the station a large lump of coal was hurled from a loaded car and struck several persons standing on the platform. Anna C. Hales, of Altoona, sustained a compound fracture of the ankle. Anna M. Vinder, of Tyrone, and Mrs. Earle Dingate, of Elyria, Ohio, were painfully bruised. The coal fell from one of the cars in the front end of the train and persons standing on the platform were so taken by surprise that the accident happened before they could realize their danger.

CANDIDATES? 39 OF 'EM AT WILLIAMS REUNION

Army of Office-Seekers Swarmed to Picnic Near Martha.

26 ARE PHOTOGRAPHED

Delightful Day Spent in John Q. Miles Grove on Saturday—Interesting Addresses Features of Program—Large Crowd Present.

There were exactly thirty-nine candidates for county offices at the big Williams reunion, held on Saturday in the grove of John Q. Miles, near Martha. Fortunately for the reunion, there were more than a thousand members of the Williams connection in attendance, and the annual outing in the woods was quite in keeping with the high standard of the reunions of other years.

It was apparent early in the day that pretty nearly every candidate in the field had his eye on the Williams reunion. Some arrived in automobliles, others traveled by train or in carriages, while a few who thought old-fashioned tricks might catach the most votes made the journey on foot. With so many candidates on the grounds and so many cards being handed out it kept the crowd busy figuring out who was who and what it was all about. The humor of the situation could not but appeal to everybody, including the candidates, and sizing up the emergency twenty-six of the men who are perfectly willing to serve the public naturally drifted together at the suggestion of Commissioners' clerk J. Homer Decker and were photographed in a group. They may hold a little reunion of their own after the election.

The reunion was the twelfth held by the Williams family and connection. Ideal weather and a well planned program of events, together with the large and happy throng present, served to make the occasion a most enjoyable one. During the morning there was an unbroken stream of vehicles pouring into the picnic grounds while each incoming train added its quota to the throng. With the exception of the early afternoon flyer, all trains stopped at the grounds, a concession by the Pennsylvania Railroad which was greatly appreciated by the people.

At 2 o'clock E. J. Williams, president of the association, called the assemblage to order at the speakers' stand and Rev. Mr. Ellis, pastor of the Bald Eagle Baptist church, asked the Divine blessing upon all present. During the devotional service the Port Matilda band rendered several sacred selections. The address of welcome was delivered by Rev. H. E. McKelvey, pastor of the Port Matilda United Brethren church and a Martha boy, born and bred. While not one of the Williams connection, Mr. McKelvey has associated for so many years with the family of that honored name that he aptly said he felt just like one of them. Rev. Gordon A. Williams, pastor of the Fairview Methodist Episcopal church, of Altoona, delivered the response, his address being an interesting and instructive discussion of the mystery of the twentieth century. In his address Mr. Williams pointed out that in the centuries that have come and gone the spirit of Roger Williams, of Puritanical fame, of General George Washington, of the friends of Washington, of Captain Joshua Williams, also of Revolutionary fame, and of the numerous ministers from 1776 to the present day, had not lost the spirit of the Fatherland—the mountains of Wales.

As is always the case, in the throng were numerous visitors from distant points, thus adding to the pleasure of the day. These included Mrs. William Eckley, of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Hoover, of Kylertown; Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Irwin, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Nepley, of Mill Hall, Deland Decker, of Spring Mills, Rev. and Mrs. Gordon A. Williams, of Altoona; Mrs. G. F. Martin, of Greeley, Colorado; Morice Smith and Daniel Weible, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Eunice Kline and daughter, Mrs. Zoe Fink, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hartsock, of Clearfield; Mr. and Mrs. Reeder Williams, of Altoona, and Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Hartsock, of Lakemont.

"The Republican" desires to extend a word of praise to the Port Matilda cornet band, which is made up chiefly of members of the Williams family and which rendered some especially pleasing music. The old-time Martha drum corps, having among the number John B. Thompson, of Altoona, and George Stine, of Buffalo Run, was present and gave an exhibition which demonstrated that the "boys" had lost none of their snap and ginger of early days.

Following custom of former years, the Obituary Committee presented its report, as follows:

J. Calvin Williams, born February 29, 1837; died October 17, 1910.

Mrs. Frances L. Williams, wife of George R. Williams, born June 15, 1851; died June 5, 1911.

Mrs. Nannie Williams Crain, wife of W. Scott Crain, born December 15, 1877; died August 4, 1911.

We recommend that the sympathy and condolence of our association be extended the bereaved families and that these facts be recorded in the minutes of the association.

CROPS IN THE STATE

Census Director Durand Issues Official Bulletin on Pennsylvania.

Statistics relative to the leading crops for the State of Pennsylvania, collected at the Thirteenth Decennial Census, April 15, 1910, are contained in an official statement issued by Census Director Durand, at Washington, D. C. It is based on tabular summaries prepared under the direction of Dr. Le Grand Powers, chief statistician for agriculture in the Bureau of the Census. The figures are preliminary and subject to slight revision later, when a few other farms, whose returns, now incomplete, will be included in the final tables. It is not expected that these additions will materially modify the amounts of rates given in the present statement.

The leading crops of the State for 1909, ranked in the order of valuation, were: Hay and forage, $45,609,000; corn, $27,326,000; wheat, $22,917,000; oats, $14,418,000; potatoes, $11,971,000; tobacco, $3,926,000; buckwheat, $2,895,000, and rye, $2,673,000.

Between 1899 and 1909 hay and forage showed a decrease of 182,306 acres, or 5.6 per cent. From 2,714,909 acres in 1879, hay and forage increased to 3,323,689, in 1889, decreased to 3,269,441 in 1899, and again to 3,087,135 in 1909. The total yield in 1909 was 3,673,964 tons; the average yield per acre, 1.2 tons; the average value per acre, $14.75.

From 1899 to 1909 corn decreased 100,489 acres, or 6.8 per cent. Starting with 1,373,270 acres in 1879, corn fell by 1889 to 1,252,369, rose by 1899 to 1,480,833, and again fell by 1909 to 1,380,344. Hence, for the 30-year period corn shows but slight increase. The total yield in 1909 was 41,485,333 bushels; the average yield per acre, 30 bushels; the average value per acre, $19.80.

Wheat, in the decade from 1899 to 1909, decreased 288,652 bushels, or 19.1 per cent. From 1,445,384 acres in 1879 wheat dropped to 1,318,472 by 1889, rose to 1,514,043 by 1899, and again dropped to 1,225,391 by 1909. The aggregate yield in 1909 was 21,561,239 bushels of which 21,542,894 bushels were winter wheat. The average yield per acre was 18 bushels; the average value per acre, $18.70.

Oats during the 10-year period ending 1909 decreased 29,887 acres, or 2.5 per cent. From 1,237,593 acres in 1879 oats rose to 1,310,197 in 1889, fell to 1,173,847 in 1899, and again to 1,143,960 in 1909. The total yield in 1909 was 28,164,932 bushels; the average yield per acre, 25 bushels; the averege value pe acre, $12.60.

During the decade prior to 1909 potatoes increased 33,988 acres, or 14.9 per cent. From 1879, when 183,079 acres were harvested, potatoes in 1889 rose to 191,992, in 1899 to 227,867, and in 1909 to 261,855. The aggregate yield in 1909 was 21,734,744 bushels; the average yield per acre, 83 bushels; the average value per acre, $45.70.

For the decade ending 1909 tobacco showed an increase of 13,984 acres, or 50.4 per cent. Starting with 27,566 acres in 1878, tobacco fell by 1889 to 26,955, rose to 27,760 by 1899, and again to 41,744 by 1900. The total yield in 1909 was 47,164,800 pounds; the average yield per acre, 1105 pounds; the average value per acre, $94.05.

Buckwheat, between 1899 and 1909 increased 42,767 acres, or 17.1 per cent. From 246,199 acres in 1879, buckwheat dropped to 210,488 in 1889, rose to 249,840 in 1899, and again in 1909 to 292,607. The total yield in 1909 was 4,795,889 bushels; the average yield per acre, 16 bushels; the average value per acre, $9.90.

In the decade from 1899 to 1909, rye decreased 37,547 acres, or 12.1 per cent. From 398,465 acres in 1879, rye declined by 1889 to 336,041, by 1899 to 310,048, and by 1909 to 272,501. The aggregate production in 1909 was 3,495,829 bushels; the average yield per acre, 13 bushels; the average value per acre, $9.80.

The cereals had an aggregate acreage of 3,323,096 acres in 1909, as compared to 4,738,195 in 1899, a decrease of 1,415,099 acres, or 8.8 per cent. Among the cereals corn ranked first, not only in acreage but also in value, comprising slightly less than one-third and two-fifths, respectively, of the total acreage and total value. Wheat stood second, being equal to slightly less than one-third the total acreage and total value of the cereals. Oats ranked third, having an acreage and value, respectively, about four-fifths and more than one-half as great as corn. The average value of cereals per acre was $16.25, considerably above that of hay and forage, and slightly more than one-third that of potatoes. Corn showed the highest average value per acre; rye the lowest. Of the hay and forage crops, "Timothy and clover mixed" ranked first in acreage and value, constituting more than one-half in each respect of the entire hay and forage crop. "Timothy alone" ranked second in acreage and value. "Other tame or cultivated grasses" stood third in acreage and fourth in value, while "coarse forage" was fourth in acreage but third in value. The total value of the hay and forage crop was equal to more than three-fifths that of the combined cereals. There were a number of miscellaneous crops, and the most of them were well above the more usual crops in value per acre.

Fish in Season.

In no season of the year do the counters from which fish are sold show greater variety than during July and August and the epicure to whom fresh fish is a chosen food has now his widest selection.

Not only is there wide choice but prices of some of the most desirable fish are low and the housekeeper who is mindful of the fact that plenty of phosphates should be supplied to her family will be both economical and sensible if she gives plenty of fish in her summer menus.

Bluefish, cod, haddock, halibut, salmon and mackerel—these are cooked in most families, but there are other fish that can be bought at reasonable prices to furnish variety, and with some of these the average housekeeper is not very familiar.

Two kinds of fish which are just now at the height of their season are weak fish and blackfish, both of which are selling at 10 cents a pound. The former is a very sweet, delicious fish and its flesh is very white. Blackfish has a firm flesh, few bones and white meat. It may be either boiled or baked.

A fish which is excellent for planking is the white fish. This, also, is very sweet. It begins running about the time shad disappear and is frequently called fresh water shad. It is somewhat oily.

Sea bass, now at its best, is selling at 15 cents a pound. The housekeeper can readily enough pick out this fish because of its coarse looking scales and dark blue color.

Many people think that the finest fish for the Summer is the bluefish, either fried or stuffed and roasted. The run this season has been excellent, and bluefish can be bought from 10 cents to 15 cents a pound.

Three kinds of mackerel are in the market now. The Boston blue mackerel, which is a favorite, is sold at 50 cents a fish for one weighing about three pounds. Spanish mackerel sell at 20 cents a pound, and the Bonita mackerel at 15 cents.

Easter salmon are in the market—that is to say, salmon from the Kennebec and from Canadian waters. These fish swarm up into rivers in the summer to lay their eggs in fresh water, and the duration of the salmon run marks the "season" for this delicious fish. Salmon is now selling at 30 cents a pound, about as low as it goes.

Salmon steak, cut from four to six inches thick, boiled in salted water in a bag, and served with a white sauce garnished with hard boiled eggs and eaten with an accompaniment of green peas is a favorite summer dish, and is served in its perfection by the housekeepers of Maine.

Sturgeon are also in the market and selling at 35 cents the pound. Sturgeon is skinned before being sold and the purchaser pays only for solid meat. The sturgeon can be distinguished from other fish by its yellowish flesh, just as the salmon can by its pink flesh.

This is also the season for crabs, both the hard shell and the soft shell varieties. These come now principally from Maryland waters. Soft shell crabs, small size, are 50 cents a dozen, large size $1 a dozen. Hard shell crabs are from 40 cents to 50 cents a dozen depending on their size. In buying crabs the purchaser should make sure that they are literally "alive and kicking."

Steak cod is selling at 10 cents a pound, this being dear for the season; sword fish is at 20 cents, about its normal price; pike brings 25 cents a pound for fish weighing from a pound to a pound and a quarter, which means that the buyer has to pay for the head. Scup, that small flat fish which is one of the best of pan fishes 15 cents a pound—not cheap when it is remembered that the scup has a large head.

Kingfish, usually an expensive delicacy with its dry meat, is now selling at 20 cents the pound—less than half what it brings in winter. These seldom run larger than a pound and a half in weight.

Powder Puffs.

Bathing the eyes in a solution of boracic acid keeps them bright and free from inflammation.

After the morning bath use one of the reliable disappearing creams on the face instead of the greasy variety which gives an oily look to the skin.

Regular bath powder is cheaper than talcum powder and just as efficacious for bathing purposes.

Heavily penciled eyes give a look of age and sophistication to the entire face. If lines are introduced they should be merely shadows.

Loss of Time Means Loss of Pay.

Kidney trouble and the ills it breeds means lost time and lost pay to many a working man. M. Balent, 1214 Little Penna St., Streator, Ill., was so bad from kidney and bladder trouble that he could not work, but he says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills for only a short time and got entirely well and was soon able to go back to work, and am feeling well and healthier than before." Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, quick in results—a good friend to the working man or woman who suffers from kidney ills. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Eligible.

"It must be exciting to live in one of those South American republics."

"Yes. Even if political disturbances cease, every man, woman and child will be eligible to some kind of a revolutionary society.

TAKE IT IN TIME

Just as Scores of Bellefonte People Have.

Waiting doesn't pay.
If you neglect the aching back,
Urinary troubles, diabetes, surely follow.
Doan's Kidney Pills relieve backache,
Cure every kidney ill.
Bellefonte citizens endorse them.

William McClellan, 244 E. Lamb St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up in good shape and consequently I think highly of them. I suffered for a long time from a pain and lameness across my back and some mornings I could hardly get out of bed. My back ached constantly and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. Hearing a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to give them a trial and procured a supply from Green's Pharmacy Co. They cured me and I am now enjoying good health. My advice to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint is to take Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.)

Re-endorsement. Mr. McClellan was interviewed on Nov. 23, 1909 and he said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills once or twice during the past two years, while suffering from backache and they have given me prompt relief. You are welcome to publish my testimonial at any time you desire."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

About Sewing Machines.

Do you know how to use all the "attachments" of your sewing machine?

If not, why don't you go to the agency and learn? No doubt when you bought the machine the agent didn't forget to magnify their number and usefulness. There's the darner, for instance. Expertness in its use would no doubt save a good deal of time.

A machine lasts longer and keeps in better order if run evenly at moderate speed. It's better for the one who operates it, too.

Keep the machine covered when not in use—and this means if you leave it for a couple of hours, meaning to use it again. Especially is this good advice if it stands near an open window.

Don't place the machine near the register or radiator.

Buy bobbins for the machine by the box. It saves time and trouble. Keep a supply of needles on hand. When you get down to your last needle it is perfectly certain to break when you are most inconvenienced.

To rethread a machine, hold a piece of white paper on the other side of the eye. The eye is thus made more prominent. It is a hindrance to have to "jump and run" for scissors, pins, tape line, etc. Fasten scissors and small pin cushion to the machine by yard-long ribbons; than they will not be carried away.

It saves work to have a bag or basket by the side of the machine to receive scraps. If working on white muslin, silk, etc., spread a sheet on the floor to protect the material.

Reduced Rates via Pennsylvania Railroad.

Successful Packing.

Packing well is a gift to be cultivated, and it is not difficult though some women find it impossible to learn how to do it. Just now our slim little garments make it possible for us to carry more in a small space than we have ever done before, and the girl on a holiday may, like her brother, go far ahead with one bag and perhaps a little hand bag for necessaries of the journey if it is to be a long one. One side of the holiday bag should be given up to frocks, blouses and scarves. When there are no trimmings to crush, there is nothing easier than to fold a dress into the smallest compass. Don't be afraid so long as the folds are in the right place and the material smooth; any creases can easily be shaken out when the frock is unfolded.

In the second side of the bag should be placed wearing linen and boots; books and stockings should be arranged round the edges. When the bag is a man's the boots should be placed with the heavier garments, as plenty of room must be left for shirts, collars and cuffs among the underclothing.

When a trunk is being packed boots, books and boxes should be placed in the bottom, with stockings to fill up gaps. Underclothing should come next and dresses last of all. But it must be remembered that the packing must be close and that where corners are left they must be filled up with twists of paper, otherwise things will tumble about and crush each other, especially if there are any breakable things about.

Any special gowns, such as those of silk of chiffon, should be folded with layers of silk paper between the folds, white paper is invaluable also in the hat box.

Ribbons, jabots, belts and handkerchiefs should all be placed in boxes, and a blouse box is much valued by the tidy girl.

Bottomless Tarpon Springs.

The great body of water which gave the name to Tarpon Springs, Fla., is classed by all of the old citizens as bottomless. The center appears to be a hole curbed with jagged rocks. Sometimes the weight has lodged and then dropped on to the extent of the sounding line afterward. Many citizens say that they know the depth to be in excess of 700, 800 and 900 feet. Once when a depth of 200 feet was reached an obstruction was encountered; then it was dislodged, dropped on farther, and the line broke. A very heavy weight has to be used on account of the depth, and when divers are sent down in the springs, as they have been recently, they report the same great jagged hole, which, so far as they can find out, is without bottom. The spring is supposed to be the principal outlet of that beautiful Lake Butler which lies just a mile east of the town. Tidewater comes up into the spring, and it has acquired the name because it was the playground of the silvered king of fish, the tarpon.—Manufacturers' Record.

Preferred to Be a Quack.

A quack at a fair near Paris was driving a roaring trade selling nostrums, drawing teeth and beguiling the crowd in the usual ways, says the British Medical Journal. The letter of the French law against unqualified practice is very strong, though owing to the indifference of the magistrates it is not strictly carried out. This, however, was a particularly flagrant case, and the police felt compelled to intervene. The quack was therefore accosted by the guardians of the law, taken to a tent at the back of his stand and requested to show his diploma. To the stupefaction of the gendarmes he exhibited a perfectly authentic degree of doctor of medicine of the University of Paris. They were profuse in their apologies, which the doctor cut short with an urgent entreaty that they should say nothing about what they had seen, "for," he said, "if the people know that I am a qualified doctor I shall have no more customers."

A Marvel of Insect Mechanism.

The sting of a certain Indian fly offers as marked an example of design in nature as can well be imagined. When seen through a magnifying glass it is found to be composed of three sharp blades folded into one with their cutting edges outward and running down to one fine point. When the fly inserts this up to the hilt in its victim the three blades fly apart, and then it is seen that each inner edge is a beautiful saw, worked by six separate muscles, so that when withdrawn the instrument rips its way out with a gush of blood. But now comes the most curious provision of all. It would not do to fold up these blades with the blood adhering to them, so each blade is provided at its base with a fine brush of hairs growing out of an oil gland, which provides an antiseptic secretion to keep the blades clean.

Careless, as Usual.

The great baseball player's wife had never seen a game, but he finally persuaded her to view one in which he was to play.

He was doing his best, of course. One strike had been called on him, and, as usual in baseball anecdotes, two men were out and the bases were full. Our hero was gathering his strength for the swat he was going to give the ball.

And the ball came. He knew it was his as the ball started, and with a mighty crack he lifted it into space.

Dropping his bat, he sped for first, and ere the roar of applause burst out a slight woman in the grand stand rose and called:

"Will, come back here and put that bat where it belongs!"—Buffalo Express.

Kissing Ethel.

She was fashionably dressed and gave out the perfume of violets as the brakeman turned to help her up the steps of the train which was due to leave. Turning to her maid, she said:

"Oh, I must kiss Ethel goodby!"

"Oh, go on," said the fresh brakeman. "I'll kiss Ethel goodby."

"No, you won't, either," came from the woman. "That precious dog was never kissed by a stranger in her whole life!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Sensible Course.

"Why do you insist on that boy's studying music?" said the man with respect for art. "You know very well he can't sing."

"Yes," replied the patient father; "I know it. And I want him to learn enough about music to realize it for himself."—Exchange.

Another Viewpoint.

Clara—I overheard Mr. Bimberly say to a friend the other evening that I was a pretty young lady. Maude—Well, you are pretty young; but, of course, you are growing older each day.—Chicago News.

An Obstructionist.

"So you are going to have a new gown?"

General Bate's Unlighted Cigars.

General William B. Bate of Tennessee after distinguished service in behalf of the south was governor and then United States senator. His bravery in battle was attested by a dozen wounds, and in a single engagement three horses were shot from under him.

"It was a habit of the old warrior," said a man who knew him well, "to continually carry an unlighted cigar in his mouth, but few of those who noticed it ever knew the reason of his failure to smoke the weed. At the battle of Shiloh he and a brother were standing side by side when the brother asked General Bate for a light, as he had a cigar, but no match. The general lit a match and handed it to his klasman, who had scarcely applied it to the tobacco ere a cannon ball came hurtling through the air and severed the smoker's head from his body. The terrible tragedy of Shiloh's bloody field was why in all the years that followed the surviving brother was never known to light a cigar."

Our First Steam Warship.

The Fulton, which at the time of her construction in the early thirties was classed as a "steam battery," was the first United States warship that was propelled by steam. She was built under the superintendence of Commodore Matthew Galbraith Perry and at the time of her completion in 1837 was regarded as one of the world's wonders by way of naval architecture and power at sea. The Fulton was the cause of no little speculation on the part of European powers, for at that time she was looked upon by other nations as all but invincible. When this wonder of the sea was put in commission Commodore Perry, then holding the rank of commander, was put in command of her, and he presently came to be called the "father of the steam navy." The Fulton was built primarily for defense of New York harbor, but she served as well to demonstrate the practical utility of steam power for warships.—New York Times.

Silent Lawyers.

It is almost a maxim nowadays that a lawyer's real importance at the bar is in inverse ratio to his prominence in the papers. The truth is that lawyers of great importance seldom nowadays appear in court. In the old days the great lawyer was the eloquent lawyer; today the great lawer is the silent one. Then bar reputations were made literally at the bar. Today they are made in the offices of the skyscrapers neighboring on Wall street. In England a visit any day to the law courts will be repaid by the sight of some famous K. C. assisting the court in a dramatization of the final chapter from "Alice In Wonderland." But you might prowl for a month within the precincts of the New York courthouse without encountering a lawyer whose name would signify anything remarkable to the historian of the New York bar.—American Magazine.

Curious Justice.

A Paris contemporary gives us a glimpse of the administration of justice among the natives in the Lower Niger territory, which for its efficacy migh be compared with Swift's account of the means adopted by judicial authorities in Laputa, we believe, to discover conspirators. If a native is accused of theft the heads of the village make a decoction of herbs and put into the essence about a grain of ground pepper. The liquid is then lightly applied to the eyelid. If the suspect weeps he is considered guilty. But the murder test is an improvement upon that of theft. The "wise man" of the district draws a vessel of water, into which he puts some poison. Then he takes a cow's tail and "asperges" the eyes of the supposed assassin. If the man becomes blind he is pronounced a murderer.

For Testing Gold.

The acid used by jewelers for testing gold is extremely powerful and has to be very carefully handled. To prevent any considerable quantity of the acid being spilled a specially constructed bottle is employed. The stopper of this is made of glass and contains a long pointed glass rod which passes down the center of the bottle. When an article of jewelry is to be tested the stopper is simply removed, and the article is touched with the point of the glass rod to which a very slight quantity of acid has adhered. Gold is not affected by the acid, but imitation metal turns green.

One Way to Arbitrate.

Commodore Vanderbilt used often to arbitrate his tenants' disputes, and one day two farmers called on him in his function o arbitrator. The commodore before consenting to act put to the first tenant the necessary question:

"Now, Henry, if I consent to arbitrate will you abide by my decision?"

The farmer, a hard headed old fellow, answered thoughtfully:

"Well, commodore, I'd like to know what it is first."

A Cruel Apologist.

"Mr. Bliggins takes himself very seriously," said the critical young woman.

"Well," replied Miss Cayenne, "you can't blame him. To be thrown into a cruel world with no more brains than he possesses would be a serious matter for anybody."—Washington Star.

Fixed to no spot is happiness. 'Tis nowhere to be found or everywhere.—Pope.

They Insisted on Brevity.

The Spartans were distinguished for the brevity and conciseness of their speech. On one occasion during a terrible famine the inhabitants of an island in the Aegean sea sent an ambassador to Sparta, who made a speech imploring its aid. He had hardly finished before the Spartans sent him back these words, "We did not understand the end of your speech and have forgotten the beginning."

The poor, starving people chose another spokesman and impressed upon him to make his request as brief as possible. He therefore took with him a quantity of sacks, opened one before the assembly and said simply, "It is empty; fill it."

The sack was filled as well as the others, but the chief of the assembly said as he dismissed the ambassador, loaded with meal: "It wasn't necessary to inform us that the sack was empty. We saw it ourselves. Neither was it necessary to request us to fill it. We should have done it on our own account. Be less long winded next time."

Just What He Wanted.

The superintendent of the capitol and its grounds at Washington was walking along one of the corridors in the house office building one day when a greenhorn congressman, stewing with rage, grabbed him by the sleeve.

"What's the matter?" asked the superintendent, observing the man's emotion.

"Matter!" shouted the congressman. "Why, when I went into my office last evening there was a brand new typewriter on the desk. Now it's gone. You've got a lot of thieves around here."

The official walked into the office and without a word lifted the trap cabinet of the desk and brought the typewriter into view.

"Fine!" commented the congressman. "Now, have you got a place like that in here for my use when troublesome constituents knock on the door?"—Washington Star.

Punctuation In Piano Playing.

A joke is going the rounds of the press about the girl whose music teacher wished to compliment her, but on whom he could only say that she played the rests excellently. This is, however, real praise of a sort, for it is not every young student of music who is careful about playing the rests well. Indeed, a great many players seem to forget that the rests are just as much of the piece as is the punctuation in a sentence. Nowadays people do not put in so much punctuation as they used to do, but the pauses in the voice are there just the same and are readily understood by good readers and always regarded. The rests in music are like the pauses in reading that are needed to give expression to the sentences. If the player slights the rests or extends them too long the whole effect of the musical sentence is spoiled.—Christian Science Monitor.

Feet Versus the Pen.

In speaking of personal recollections of Dion Boucicault, Henry Miller dwells upon his superb skill as a stage director and tells of the following incident, which occurred during his first rehearsal under Boucicault:

"I went to him direct from Augustin Daly's management. Daly coached his players to cross and recross the stage during the progress of the play, with the idea that this continual moving about of the actors created dramatic action. During my first rehearsal I made a 'Daly cross' as I spoke one of my lines.

"'Why did you do that?' Boucicault asked in his quaint, quizzical manner.

"I explained that I imagined it would keep the scene moving.

"'Thanks, my boy,' said Boucicault dryly, 'but if I cannot interest the audience with my pen I don't think you can with your feet.'"

Bulldogs and Bulls.

Bulldog is so called because of his native antipathy to the bull. A thoroughbred bull pup as young as six months the first time he beholds a bull will run at the head, which is his invariable point of attack, and, seizing the horned beast by the lip, tongue or eye, hang on despite every attempt to detach him. The dog will even suffer himself to be killed or dismembered rather than relax his hold.—New York Telegram.

Protest.

"I beg pardon," said the new arrival, "but it seems to me it's excessively warm here."

"Eh! What?" snorted Satan. "Evidently you forget where you are. This place is meant to be warm."

"Quite so, but there's such a thing as overdoing it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Eager For Information.

An American took a friend, an Englishman, to a theater. An actor in the farce, about to do the dying act, exclaimed, "Please, dear wife, don't bury me in Yonkers!"

The Englishman turned to his friend and said, "I say, old chap, what are yonkers?"—Everybody's.

The Usual Result.

"Yes, Charlie is as brave as a stack of lions. Did you hear about his daring a policeman to arrest him?"

"No! Gee, what happened?"

"He was arrested."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution submitted to the citizens of this Commonwealth for their approval or rejection, by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Number One.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. CAPT. WILLIAMS, POSTMASTER

"The Republican" extends congratulations to Captain S. H. Williams, postmaster. In the evening of a long and honored career as a soldier, a business man and a citizen, his appointment comes as a splendid tribute to the high regard in which he is held by his home people.

The appointment brings to a close a lively contest for the honor. Postmaster Harter, who aspired for reappointment, put up a good fight. Captain Williams was confident that the final result would be in his favor. Throughout the contest was conducted in the open and above-board, the friends of the rival aspirants vigorously exercising their privilege of supporting their choice. Both aspirants conducted themselves in such a manner as to reflect credit upon themselves and their supporters.

During his term as postmaster Mr. Harter endeavored to administer the office to the best of his ability. In taking the office Mr. Williams gives assurance that his aim will be to not only give the people the very best service, but to improve upon it wherever possible. After all, efficient service is what the pubiic is most interested in. "The Republican" offers a suggestion or two to Mr. Williams. One is that the stamp window be kept open until 8 o'clock in the evening for the accommodation of persons obliged to purchase stamps with which to mail letters on the 8.20 o'clock train. If found to be practicable, we would also suggest that some plan be devised whereby business men may be able to secure mail upon the arrival of the 8.20 o'clock train in the evenings. The post office clerical force comprises hard-working, faithful employes and it does not necessarily follow, nor is it our desire, that their burdens should be increased by adopting the suggestions we have offered. If necessary the clerical staff should be increased to meet requirements.

BUT IT ISN'T.

If the "Democratic Watchman" were somewhat broader across its unspeakables it might have been of sufficient weight to prevent County Chairman Kimport from deserting the regular Democrats at Harrisburg.

JOHN'LL ATTEND TO IT.

It is said that the Hon. John A. Woodward, while in town for the meeting of the Democratic County Committee last week, partly soothed the fears of the local Democratic bosses by assuring them that no matter how things might go he would deliver the Democrats of Howard and Liberty township in November. Just leave it to John. He'll attend to it.

Explains School Code Points.

Assistant Deputy Attorney General Hargest at Harrisburg in an opinion has answered three questions that had been put to him by State Superintendent Schaeffer of the department of public instruction, relating to tax collectors of school districts.

The decision states that in second, third and fourth class districts, where the tax collector has been elected to collect school with other taxes, the directors are not authorized to appoint a different person to collect school taxes only, provided the person so elected is not so disqualified by reason of any school code provisions.

Mr. Hargest also finds, under the code, that there is nothing to prevent the appointment of a collector for 1911-1912 merely because he has failed to collect the 1910-1911 taxes, or before the code went into effect.

It is also decided that a collector must give a seperate bond to the school district in such amount as the directors may fix before he can receive his tax duplicate, whether he has given his bond, after being elected by the people or not.

Letter of Denial.

Lemont, Pa. Aug. 21.

EDITOR OF BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN:

Dear Sir:—In the interest of fairness and square dealing I ask the Bellefonte Republican to deny the published article in the Keystone Gazette to the effect that I am to take charge of the Democratic campaign in Centre County. So far as it pertains to me the article in question is wholly false and without the slightest foundation in fact. Respectfully.

REUNION OF 148TH

Survivors of Famous Old Regiment Had Delightful Time Here.

With each year thinning their ranks, the survivors of the famous old 148th. Regiment, Penna. Vols., are to be warmly congratulated upon the large attendance at the runion held in Bellefonte on Thursday of last week. The "boys" had their headquarters at the Garman House, the business sessions being held in the Court House. The social features included a dinner given by the old Colonel of the regiment, Judge James A. Beaver, at the Bush House, and automobile trips in and about town. The old soldiers were the guests of the owners of the cars and every effort possible was made to see that each visitor was provided for.

The minutes of the business sessions held follow:

The meeting was called to order by Judge Beaver. On motion, Judge Beaver was unanimously chosen to preside. W. Gemmill of "D" Company was appointed to act as Adjutant. Invocation by Rev. Emery E. Stevens, of Williamsport, son of the Regimental Chaplain. Rolls were ordered to be made of the representatives of the several Companies present.

Letters were read from comrades who for various reasons were not able to be present. One from J. M. English, expressing his hearty interest in his surviving comrades and his best wishes for their present and future welfare. Also one from D. H. Bumgardner, Oklahoma, who expressed his longings to be with the comrades and enjoy their fellowship. Though up in years already, he declared it to be his purpose to be the last survivor of the veterans of the Civil War. S. H. Sloan, of "K", A. C. Moore, of "B", Samuel Mattern and others were also heard from.

In response to H. H. Varnell's impassioned plea, it was voted unanimously to hold the next reunion—1912—at Connelsville, Pa., the third Thursday of August. Comrades John W. Stuart, George M. Boal, D. W. Miller and W. A. Ishler were appointed a Committee of Arrangements to confer with a similar Committee to be selected by H. H. Varnell from the western contingent.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Comrade Grenoble of "I" Company, for his thoughtfulness in securing a hall at Gettysburg for 1913 reunion.

Adjourned at 1 P. M. to enjoy a ride to various places of interest in and about Bellefonte, under the auspices of the Bellefonte Motor Club.

At 2.30 the comrades assembled in the dining room of the Bush House, as the guests of their old Colonel, James A. Beaver, where a bounteous repast was served. At the close of the meal, words of appreciation were spoken by Comrades Meyer and Cassidy which were feelingly responded to by the Colonel.

At 7 P. M. the comrades met at the Scenic Theatre, where they were entertained by the Bellefonte contingent by a special program prepared by T. C. Brown, proprietor, and which was greatly enjoyed by all.

At 8 P. M. comrades again assembled in the G. A. R. Hall. A vote of thanks was tendered to Gregg Post for the use of the Hall, to the Bellefonte Motor Club for the ride, and a rising vote of thanks to Col. Beaver for his hospitality.

It was suggested that every member or survivor constitute himself a Committee to inform the Colonel of any death or changes that may occur among our number during the coming year.

On motion, adjourned to meet at Connelsville the third Thursday of August, 1912. WILLIAM GEMMILL, Acting Adjutant.

GRANGERS ARE ACTIVE

Busy with Plans for Annual Picnic and Encampment at Centre Hall.

In his report as chairman of the Grange Encampment and Fair Association committee to the Centre County Pomona Grange, held at Milesburg, Hon. Leonard Rhone made the statement that every available tent had been leased, and that all the floor space in the permanent exhibiting buildings was already under contract to exhibitors. These statements are positive indexes to an unprecedentedly large number of campers and exhibitors, two elements necessary for a successful gathering in September. The exhibits of horticulture and agriculture, the antique department, the State College display, in the permanent exhibition building, will eclipse any heretofore in quantity, quality and nicety of arrangement. The displays of implements, vehicles, dairy supplies, engines, farm machinery, etc., under private tents will be larger and more varied than ever. The success in making sales at the encampment last year by the exhibitors is responsible for the increase in this very desirable feature.

The entertainments in the auditorium in the evenings will be of a high class, and popular, very similar to the scenics found almost everywhere in the larger towns and cities. These will be conducted by W. J. Anderson, of Philadelphia, who for the first time will appear in this section of the country.

During the day there will be addresses in the auditorium of special interest to the farmers as a class. These talks will be instructive and entertaining.

No admission is charged at the gates of the grounds. All exhibition buildings are open to the public as well as the large agriculture building. The lectures in the auditorium are also free.

The camp opens on Saturday, when the great majority of campers will move into their temporary homes. Sunday afternoon religious services will be held in the auditorium, conducted by Rev. S. A. Snyder.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MEYER GIVES UP JOB

balance due him for paving streets, building curbing, etc. The figures of the borough engineer showed the amount due Mr. Taylor to be several hundred dollars less than what he claimed. Under the contract with Mr. Taylor the borough retains ten per cent. of the total cost of its share of the street paving work until the streets are formally accepted by the State Highway Department. This may not be until May, 1912. The total cost to the borough for the work in question was approximately $13,000, making the amount to be retained by the borough $1,300. Council voted to give Mr. Taylor a four-months note for $1,500, as part payment on the balance due him, and that no additional payments be made to him until his work has been formally approved and accepted by the State.

Council authorized the Street Committee to replank the Lamb Street bridge and to use the old plank in repairing the Buffalo Run bridge and also that over the tail race at the Phoenix mill. Council also directed the Street Committee to assist the Misses Benner in relaying the sidewalk at their residence adjoining the Brockerhoff House. This has become necessary inasmuch as the building of the concrete sidewalk at the Brockerhoff House established a new grade and one considerably higher than that given by the borough to the Misses Benner for their present sidewalk. Council directed that new sidewalks and gutters be laid at the Andrews property, on Howard street, and also along properties of the Bush and Brew estates.

A Checking Account

In every community there are many persons who know nothing of the safety and convenience of a checking account. They do not appreciate the fact that being a regular bank depositor entitles them to many privileges and conveniences in business which they could not enjoy otherwise. They have not found out that by being a bank patron a man puts himself in position to ask and receive wise counsel in business and financial matters from men more experienced than himself and, moreover, the bank depositor is in the way of getting much more substantial aid from the banker than mere advice.

The voters of Rush township, and Sandy Ridge in particular, will have plenty of candidates for school directors from which to make a choice this fall. Almost every other fellow one meets these days is a candidate for school director, and there is some talk that several women will also enter the field, so that if we do not have good schools and good directors it will be the fault of the voters.

The Sandy Ridge baseball team is meeting with well merited success this summer, coming out victors in pretty nearly every game played thus far. The committee wish to announce that they are ready for all comers and available for an engagement at any time. The boys will not hesitate to meet any team in the county or elsewhere. Our old comrade, Austin Curtin, is back again and his many friends up here were glad to see him. He is like a father to all. He has been in the sunny South trying to build up his shattered health since the death of his brother, Col. John I. Curtin, last December. We all certainly trust that he may be spared to be with us many, many years to come.

On Saturday last there was a picturesque assemblage, it being the occasion of a Sunday school celebration at Shingletown gap. An obliging friend hitched three ladder wagons to his steam engine and hauled the happy-faced young folks, whose music made the welkin ring. A delightful day was enjoyed in the woods and when evening came all were sorry the festivities were at an end.

The big picnic at Baileyville on Saturday was a very enjoyable event for old folks as well as for the younger ones. It was an ideal day for an outing in the form of an old-fashioned basket picnic and was attended by many families and their friends. The spreading of the dinners under the pines presented an inspiring scene. During the afternoon there was a baseball game between State College and Tyrone, with J. Will Kepler umpiring the game. There were no fatalities and the game was won by State College, 5—2. It was estimated that between 3000 and 3500 persons were in attendance. By 4 o'clock in the afternoon everything in the shape of supplies was exhausted.

While on a professional visit through the Bald Eagle valley on Saturday our attention was attracted to the large throng in the grove of John Q. Miles, near Martha. It was the annual reunion of the Williams family, and as usual proved to be a very successful affair. It required only an invitation to us to stop and partake of the hospitality of Mrs. E. J. Williams, who spread a dinner fit for several Kings. It was a happy, good natured crowd at the dinner, one of the happiest there being James Schofield, of Bellefonte. When it comes to their reunion, the Williamses extend open-hearted hospitality and Republicans and Democrats are accorded a royal welcome.

Death at Scotia.

Thomas Leahr, an old soldier and resident of Scotia, died at his late home at that place on Wednesday of last week, due to diseases incident to advanced years. He was 77 years old and was one of the early settlers of that section. His wife died rather suddenly about one year ago. Burial was made on Friday in Gray's cemetery, Rev. Hugh Frain officiating.

A charming social event in Philipsburg was that on Friday afternoon of last week when friends of Miss Elizabeth Fryberger gave a variety shower in honor of her approaching marriage to Dr. Wilbur Twitmire. The latter is a son of W. T. Twitmire, of Bellefonte. The bride-to-be is a daughter of Captain and Mrs. C. T. Fryberger. The marriage will be solemnized on September 20.

Death of Mrs. Garthoof.

A sad and sudden death was that of Mrs. Katharine Garthoof, who passed away very suddenly on Monday morning at the home of her grand-daughter, Mrs. Linn Blackford. Mrs. Garthoof was 82 years of age and had been making her home with her son, John Garthoof, the mail carrier. She was in apparent good health and on Saturday went to stay at the Blackford home while Mr. and Mrs. John Garthoof were enjoying a pleasure trip to Atlantic City. On Monday morning she arose as usual and a few minutes later suffered an attack of heart failure, dying almost instantly. Surviving are one daughter, Katharine, and three sons, John, of Bellefonte; Joseph S., of Dunkardton, Iowa, and James D., of Lock Haven. Funeral services were held from the late residence at 9 o'clock today, interment being made at Zion, Mrs. Garthoof's former home.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 100 to 120,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 350 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless.

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $50,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

Staging a Play.

"I can give you the part of a butler."

"I couldn't take a small part like that."

"You are evidently not used to society drama. The butler has his share of the epigrams."—Pittsburg Post.

A DONKEY ENGINE

Illustrating Some Points In a Girl's Choice of a Husband

By EMILY SEWELL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Why is it that the most important step in life, marriage, is often decided at haphazard? Perhaps it is because every one considers marriage a lottery. At any rate, an impatient word, a flower given in the nick of time, a misunderstood sentence, a smile, will often determine whether Molly is to marry Tom, with a happy life before her, or John with misery and final divorce.

Margaret Lee, though still young and comparatively inexperienced, was born to a natural insight into such matters. Where most young ladies would give their hearts in return for a compliment, she looked for something more enduring. She was wiser even than this. She knew that she could not forecast what her fate would be with any man. Tom might be one of nature's noblemen, but he might also be a poor provider. John might be narrow minded and selfish, but might bestow upon her wealth and honors. Margaret realized that she must take her chances.

Miss Lee's choice gradually narrowed down to one of two men. Her Tom and John were Pope Armstrong and Le Baron Brown. Armstrong represented what has been said of Tom he was especially interested in his own career. Brown was, in some respects, typified by John. He was a noble fellow, but was regarded by his friends as full of fine impracticable impulses and a born gambler; not a gambler in the narrow, but the broad sense. Both wanted Margaret, and Margaret wanted one or the other of them. Her judgment said Armstrong, her inclination favored Brown.

One evening Armstrong went to see her and used very excellent arguments why she should marry him. He was getting a good salary, with prospects of a better. He was putting aside 30 per cent of his income and already had a nest egg laid up that was paying him a good interest. "I am going for houses and lands," he said, "and you know that this is no vain boast, for I have already done the hardest part of the work. I have got the first thousand dollars."

Margaret's head, if not her heart, was won. She remembered that Brown had recently loaned a friend $500, that he never expected to see again. Would she not better settle the matter between them now, and in favor of Armstrong? She would if she could, but she could not.

"Come tomorrow evening," she said, "and I'll try to give you an answer."

"I'll tell what I'll do, Margaret," said the wooer. "I'll come tomorrow evening and we'll flip a coin to decide whether you marry me or not."

"Very well," said Margaret, in a tired way.

The next day she met Brown on the street, and he walked home with her. They had so much to say to each other that they couldn't say it all before reaching her house, so Brown went in.

"Margaret," he said, "I have no doubt that you can do better by marrying some one else than me. But my argument is this: You must take the risk any way. Why not take it with a man you love? Besides, some men are capable of being made by a wife. You would undoubtedly have a hard time with me, but you're a level headed girl, and that's the kind I need. I'm a donkey engine, and, you know, an engine can't run itself; it must have an engineer."

Margaret was so influenced by this argument, especially since her heart was enlisted, that she promised the young man that if something—she wouldn't tell what—turned out the next evening a certain way she would marry him. Brown showed that when interested in a subject he had a lot of hang on in him, for he never gave up till he drew the information out of her that she was to decide his rival's fate by the spinning of a coin. Then he refused to let go until she had agreed to give him an equal chance. She consented that he should be present the next evening and the coin should decide between him and Armstrong. The coin would be spun as a bit of pleasantry, but it was understood that whichever man won won in earnest.

The advantage was all with Brown because he knew of the game to be played and had a day in which to prepare for it. One may say that in such an affair there is no preparation to be made or if any is possible it is dishonorable.

But while Armstrong had the steadiness of a planet revolving in its fixed orbit, Brown was a man for occasion. While he had noble impulses, he did not allow them to run away with him in the matter of the girl he loved. All's fair in war and love is a principle of nature. During the evening he spun coins on a smooth table top till midnight. Before he had finished he had discovered how to make them fall on which ever side he chose.

The next morning he telephoned to his employer that he would not be ready for business that day and had no excuse to offer for his absence. "Very sorry to lose you, Mr. Brown," was the reply, "but you needn't come tomorrow; your place will be filled."

It may seem singular that a man struggling to get a wife should give up the income on which to support her, but Brown argued that he couldn't get the wife and keep the position. He possessed the faculty of deciding between the greater and the lesser. He needed all of the day to continue his preparations for the game he was to play in the evening. If he lost there was no recovery. If he won he had a lifetime in which to secure another position.

When the evening for the trial came Brown had used up in preparation every moment since he had parted with Margaret the day before, except eight hours for sleep. It was not that he dreaded failure, but detection. If he were caught introducing loaded coins for the spinning he could not tell just what would be the result. He might lose the girl. He certainly would incur the contumely of his rival, and his action might prove ruinous to him. But nothing troubled him except the possible loss of the prize.

Brown called late enough to give his rival an opportunity to get in before him, then entered as though he had merely dropped in casually. Armstrong looked annoyed, and Margaret appeared to be very regretful of having drifted into the position she occupied. The three with difficulty kept up an embarrassing conversation for half an hour, when Armstrong, giving Margaret a knowing look, proposed to decide a question he had raised by spinning a coin. He had invited her to go to the theater with him, and she seemed to be in doubt what day to set for the purpose. His proposition he intended for an introduction to the trial that was to decide his fate with Margaret. The night for attending the theater having been settled, Brown proposed some other way of amusing the trio by coin spinning. Margaret wore an American Beauty rose in her hair, and at last Brown proposed to Armstrong to spin a coin for it. Margaret consented and Armstrong won the rose. Then Brown spoke.

"Mr. Armstrong, there is a prize we both desire, though I can't say that either will possess it. I shall not name it. You are perfectly aware of what it is. I will spin a silver half dollar for it, best three out of five."

Armstrong looked at Brown and understood. Then he looked at Margaret and saw that, while she did not approve, she did not forbid. They had been playing with a coin that Armstrong had taken from his pocket. Brown picked it up and said: "We will begin with this half dollar; spin it twice; I will then furnish one which we will spin twice; then we will spin one belonging to Miss Lee."

Placing the coin under his forefinger, he asked Armstrong, "Heads or tails?" Armstrong chose heads, the coin was spun and Armstrong won. The next spinning was by Armstrong, who lost. At the third test Brown declined to substitute his own coin, but won. Brown lost the fourth test, making a tie. He then asked Margaret for a coin, which she gave him.

All three knew what was at stake. Armstrong was composed outwardly, but excited inwardly. Brown showed no emotion whatever. Margaret was drawing long breaths, and her color was leaving her. Brown called upon her to spin the coin. She consented, and Brown won, gaining the best three in five and the prize.

Armstrong's eyes flashed. Taking up the coin he examined it critically.

"Would you accuse me of cheating?" asked Brown.

"All's fair in war and in love," was the dogged reply.

"So I thought till I sat down for this test, when my conscience told me that an unfair advantage is dishonorable in any event. I am an expert at coin spinning, if I may use my own coin, as I will show you. In this contest you furnished the coin which tied us, while Miss Lee furnished the one that decided between us. Now I will show you that with my own coin I can win every time."

Taking a silver half dollar from his pocket, he called on Armstrong to choose heads or tails and spun it, and Armstrong lost. Brown repeated this seven times, winning every time. Armstrong took up the coin and examined it carefully, but could see nothing unusual about it.

"Is it loaded?" he asked.

"No," replied Brown. Taking a small magnifying glass from his pocket, he asked Armstrong to examine the coin with it. Armstrong saw that the edge of the milling on the head side had been filed smooth. This would naturally cause the coin to sink "head" side down.

"Let us try it again," said Brown, "and see if tails will always be up." He did so, and, contrary to expectation, head was always up. Brown then showed him that the coin had been filed on the tail side. He had changed coins without their knowing it.

Armstrong arose and, concealing his chagrin as well as he could, bowed politely to both of those he left behind and withdrew.

The moment Margaret was left alone with the man who had won she threw herself into his arms.

"You could not do it, could you?" she exclaimed impulsively.

"No," he said. "I couldn't."

"But you intended to do it?"

"Yes, I did. It seemed that I couldn't take any risk in this one matter. I spent a whole day in making preparations to win and gave up my position to gain time for the purpose. So you see you are to be possessed by a man who is"—

"Never mind. I am possessed by the man I want."

Brown became a successful and distinguished man, with whom his wife was happy and of whom she was proud. But he always said she was his engineer.

Borrowed to Save.

Uncle Reuben, the village whitewasher and man of all work, was a frequent borrower of small sums from his neighbor, Colonel Arkwright, and as a rule he repaid these little debts at the appointed time. But on one occasion when he had been accommodated with a loan of $2.50, which he promised to return in a few days, he allowed two or three weeks to pass without making any mention of his indebtedness and, in fact, seemed to avoid his creditor. But one morning the colonel unexpectedly encountered him at the postoffice.

"Hello, Uncle Rube! Didn't you borrow a little money from me several weeks ago?"

"Dat's right, cunnel," said the old man. "I sholy did."

"You told me you'd pay it back in three or four days. Have you had bad luck?"

"No, suh," responded Uncle Reuben. "I'll tell you how it was, cunnel. I lacked jes' two dollahs an' a half o' havin' ten dollahs to put in de savin's bank, an' I used it fo' dat. It's all right, cunnel. I won't fo'git it."—Youth's Companion.

Insane English Monarchs.

George III. is the only British monarch who in modern times has been placed under restraint and deprived of his authority because of insanity, though similar measures were at one time contemplated with regard to his son, George IV., the monarch who has been described as "a bad son, a bad husband, a bad father, a bad subject, a bad monarch and a bad friend" and whose conduct while on the throne was characterized by an eccentricity which bordered on lunacy.

The insanity of George III. was really brought about by the dangerous illness of his youngest and favorite child, Princess Amelia. The unlikelihood of her recovery preyed upon him and hastened the attack of mental derangement which incapacitated him from reigning, although he had previously suffered from this malady. He died hopelessly insane at Windsor after losing his sight as well as his senses.—Pearson's.

The Difference.

It was at an afternoon concert, and in the stalls sat a smartly dressed girl and the young man who deemed her the most precious jewel of the universe. Behind them sat a couple of the type of concert goers who came rather to discuss the audience than listen to the music.

"Look at that girl just in front of us," commented one in a very audible whisper. "She's shop assistant at La's. I should like to know what business she has at a gathering of this sort. And just look at her hat! She served me the other day with the one I am wearing, and I suppose she persuades herself that there is no difference between it and mine. I never"—

The girl in front turned with a crimson face.

"Oh, yes, madam, there's a difference," she said quietly; "mine is paid for."—London Tit-Bits.

Irving's Modesty.

Fuller Mellish, who was for several years in the company of Sir Henry Irving, first coming to America in his support, told a characteristic story of the great English actor.

"We were discussing Tennyson in the beefsteak room of the Lyceum one night," said Mr. Mellish, "when Sir Henry came over and joined in the conversation. 'Ah, yes,' he said, 'Tennyson. To be sure I know him. Clever chap, yes, but vain. One night Tennyson and I were walking down Piccadilly together, and as we passed a crowd on the street corner several of the men took off their hats and bowed. Ha! Do you know Tennyson thought they were bowing to him. Extraordinary! Yes, clever chap, but vain, you know.'"

Quick Action.

A southern farmer was trying to sell a mule to a negro who two years before had been kicked on the head by the animal.

"Of course," said the farmer, "this mule kicks, but"—

"I don' wan' him," objected the colored man emphatically.

"Just because he kicks?" asked the farmer, with an air of contempt.

"Humph!" grunted the negro. "Dat mule don' kick; he shoots."—Popular Magazine.

A Witty Thief.

Munich has been visited by a thief with a sense of humor. Several days ago all the clocks in the ministry of railways came to a standstill. The central or "master clock," which controls all the others, had been stolen. In its place was a sheet of paper with the words, "Time was made for slaves."

Making a Hero.

Found a Way to Help.

A worthy old Quaker who lived in a country town in England was rich and benevolent, and his means were put in frequent requisition for purposes of local charity or usefulness. The townspeople wanted to rebuild their parish church, and a committee was appointed to raise funds. It was agreed that the Quaker could not be asked to subscribe toward an object so contrary to his principles; but then, on the other hand, so true a friend to the town might take it amiss if he was not at least consulted on a matter of such general interest. So one of their number went and explained to him their project; the old church was to be removed and such and such steps taken toward the construction of a new one.

"Thee wast right," the Quaker said, "in supposing that my principles would not allow me to assist in building a church. But didst thee not say something about pulling down a church? Thee may'st put my name down for a hundred pounds."—Merivale's "Historical Studies."

Gautier's Superstition.

Theophile Gautier, the critic, novelist and poet, like many another great man, was superstitious and believed in the evil eye. Offenbach was his aversion, and in this respect a Paris contemporary tells us that one day the son and father were walking together. The son, for wickedness' sake, started a conversation about Offenbach, and his father gave him to understand that the subject was disagreeable. Nothing daunted, the lad led Gautier to a shop window where was exposed a photograph of the composer.

As they resumed their walk the son observed, "Well, you see, father, after all, nothing has happened through looking at the photograph." At that moment they were turning the corner, and the son preceded his father. In full view of the passersby Gautier administered to his tormentor a paternal kick, observing, half in anger and half in humor, "Well, something has happened."

Tight Collars.

Writing in the Hospital, London, Dr. Walford warns everybody against tight collars. He considers it remarkable that no one seems to have noticed or, at any rate, to have laid great stress on the fact that such slight obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the vessels of the brain may adversely influence the health of those who are in the habit of wearing tightly fitting neckcloths. "The fact appears to be well known to veterinary surgeons, who tell us that neck constriction through badly fitting harness is a causative factor in 'staggers' in horses," says the writer. It seems to be equally well known that dogs suffer a great deal through having to wear tightly fitting collars. Is it too much, then, Dr. Walford asks, to argue that those of us who wear our own collars too tightly buttoned may find in that practice some explanation of symptoms ascribed to other causes?

Tiny Republics.

Klein-Alp is a diminutive republic tucked away between Switzerland and France. Only in summer is the republic inhabited and then by miners and cowgirls. There is one hotel, closed during the winter. Another little republic is in Tyrol, between Austria and Italy, and in long gone years was under the jurisdiction of first a king and then an emperor. But in the adjustment of frontier lines the state of Val di Ventino was in some way overlooked, and it promptly organized itself into a lilliputian republic. It has now about 2,000 inhabitants living in six villages. Neither Val di Ventino nor Klein-Alp has any taxes. There are no officials or compulsory military services. The only industry of Val di Ventino, aside from the farming of small fields, is charcoal burning.

His Tribute of Respect.

The freckle faced boy who was about to be emancipated from high school thraldom was writing his graduating essay.

"I suppose I ought to wind it up," he reflected, "with something touching and sentimental about the leather headed, snub nosed, squeaky voiced, conceited old snoozer that runs the shebang."

Thereupon he wrote, "And now, our dear and honored principal, we turn to you," etc.—Chicago Tribune.

The Translation.

Toole, the great English comedian, was once greatly tickled at finding in a French provincial town a poster announcing a translation of "Walker, London," the farce which he himself had made famous. The adapter had translated the title as "Londres qui se promene," or "London which goes out for walks."

Fact or Fiction?

"The trouble with these literary clubs," said a captious critic, "is that they always degenerate into meetings for the exchange of gossip."

"True enough," replied an enthusiastic member, "but how can you expect anything else when facts are so much stranger than fiction?"

A Gentle Reminder.

John—I understand Dashleigh's uncle has died, leaving him a fortune.

Tom—Yes; he has received a great many congratulations. Why, even his tailor sent him a bunch of forgetmenots yesterday.—London Mail.

The Only Way Out.

Peter (sent for the milk)—Oh, mercy, I've drunk too much of it! What shall we do? Small Brother—Easy. We'll drop the jug.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

HOW MONT ALTO IS SAVING LIVES

This Case of Young Man From Huntingdon is Typical of Hundreds of Others.

IS WELL AND WORKING

Eighteen Months at the State's Free Tuberculosis Sanatorium, With Proper Care and Observation of Rules, Gave Him Back Health and Strength.

The following news story, which was published in the Huntingdon Globe of Aug. 10, 1911, gives an excellent idea of the kind of work that is being done by the State Department of Health for Pennsylvania's tuberculous poor under the supervision of State Health Commissioner Samuel G. Dixon:

Lemuel Adams, who was employed as a coatmaker in the tailoring establishment of F. W. Baldwin in Huntingdon, left here in April, 1909, presumably in the last stages of tuberculosis. He had fallen off in weight, was as thin as a match, as pale as death, and when he left here two years and four months ago none of his friends ever expected to see him in the flesh again.

But Lem was in town on Monday, and he wasn't in a box, either. He was here in citizens' clothes, looking as brown as an Indian, and feeling as frisky as a colt. From Huntingdon Mr. Adams went to Mont Alto, Franklin county, where he entered the state institution for tubercular cases and became an obedient patient under Dr. Johnston, the man in charge.

For three months Mr. Adams occupied a bed in the hospital, where it took mighty close watching to keep body and soul together, but Mr. Adams won out, and in midsummer he was sent to the camp, where he did nothing but eat and sleep and breathe the fresh air of the South mountains. He remained there eighteen months, and was in the open all the time. Many a day he rose from his bed with the snow on his pillows and blankets, but he improved right along, and in March he was discharged.

Mr. Adams is now selling lightning rods, which gives him constant outdoor employment. He will never resume the tailoring business for fear of a recurrence of his trouble. He now eats like a wood chopper, sleeps like a baby and is as strong and robust as a youngster in his teens. For years Mr. Adams' normal weight was 132 pounds. Now it is 137. When he left Huntingdon in April, 1909, he weighed 110.

The splendid condition of our friend is remarkable. Indeed, he is a living monument to the patience and skill of the men who have charge of the state institution at Mont Alto. Dr. H. C. Frontz, of Huntingdon, sent Adams to Mont Alto, and on Monday when he gazed upon the shadow of two years ago he could scarcely believe his own eyes.

Gilbert Always Remembered.

This Gilbert story reaches me from an old Harrovian, says a writer in the Manchester Guardian. In 1872 the people of the town got up theatricals to raise funds for a hospital. Dr. Butler, the head master, said he would not allow the school to go unless the pieces were first submitted to him. One was Gilbert's "Palace of Truth." In it is a passage in which the hero says to the heroine, "Meet me at 9 o'clock tonight outside the garden gate." Dr. Butler vetoed this and substituted, "Meet me at 3 o'clock this afternoon." This seemed to him more decorous. Some years after Gilbert was invited to the Harrow speeches. In reply to the toast of his health he said, "I am very much interested in visiting Harrow, for as far as I know it is the only place in the world where a line of mine has ever been condemned as improper." Great consternation prevailed—all the greater because no one except the speaker and one other person, who was just leaving Harrow in 1872, knew what he meant. It was not Gilbert's way to forget these things.

Somewhat Absentminded.

Some amusing glimpses of the discoverer of chloroform are given in the "Recollections of Lady Priestly," wife of Simpson's assistant at the time of the discovery. "The professor," she writes, "used to make his experiments with chloroform on us girls, and with some of the liquid just poured on a handkerchief would have half a dozen of us lying about in various stages of sleep. Our mother feared nothing and was only too delighted to sacrifice, if unavoidable, a daughter or two to science! * * * He was extremely absentminded. I remember once lunching at his house when he had just arrived from some antiquarian expedition. The butler, who had been unpacking his things, came in and said confidentially, 'Doctor, you have left all your flannel vests behind!' 'Ah! Oh!' replied Simpson, feeling himself all over, 'I've got them all on.'"—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Yes, sir. It's all right. It's hare soup, sir."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Cardinal's Edict

It Was but Lamely Enforced Till an Example Was Set

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Cardinal Richelieu while prime minister was virtually king of France. During his administration dueling became so common among the higher classes, especially the officers of the army, that it was evident if the practice were not checked these two classes would become depleted. The cardinal issued an order against such fighting, but it was not obeyed. In order to show that he was in earnest in the matter he made an example of the Count de Bouteville, a member of the exalted house of Montmorenci, who had disobeyed the edict. The count was beheaded. This had a wholesome effect, but not sufficient to eradicate the evil.

There was at this time a young lieutenant in the army, Jean de la Tour, married to Yvon, a lovely young woman of twenty-four, who had borne him two children. Jean was a poor swordsman, and his wife realized that if compelled to fight according to the code she would probably lose him. She urged him to practice, and when he excused himself on the ground that he had no one to fence with she offered to be his opponent.

Jean was much pleased at the idea, and his wife at once procured a suitable costume. She was about the same height and weight as her husband, and it was apparent from the first that she would make a very suitable adversary for practice purposes. While De la Tour was naturally sluggish in his movements, madame was remarkably quick. He started in as her instructor, but it was not long before he was worsted by his pupil.

But Yvon knew very well that she was not capable of bringing him up to a standard that would make him a match for accomplished swordsmen. Unknown to her husband, she took lessons of the most skillful fencing master in Paris, pledging him to keep the matter a secret. He had good reason to observe his pledge, for his pupil soon became more proficient in his art than himself.

The inevitable was not long in coming. Jean de la Tour one day, during drill, stepped in a puddle of water and bespattered a comrade's newly polished boots. Yvon was in her chamber, engaged with her maternal duties, when an officer called and asked for her husband. She told her caller that Jean was not at home, and the officer left with her a challenge for him from Lieutenant Jacques de Fontayne to mortal combat for having bespattered his boots. Madame promised to deliver the message, and the officer withdrew.

When De la Tour returned to his quarters his wife asked him to drive with her to their country place near Paris to assist her in laying out some changes she wished to make. Jean consented, and the two drove to a house and grounds near St. Cloud. Jean was surprised to see several servants there, including Francois, whom his wife had brought with her from her own family when she was married. Yvon took her husband to a room on the top story, with but one window near the ceiling, and, while telling him of the change she proposed to make in it, suddenly stepped into the hall. Jean heard the key turned in the door and his wife going down the staircase. He was a prisoner.

In a few minutes Francois came up and told his master that Mme. de la Tour desired that her husband should remain in seclusion for a few days, and she hoped he would not worry. He would be given whatever he wished for. De la Tour, at a loss to know the cause of his imprisonment, was thunderstruck.

Mme. de la Tour, returning to Paris, sent word in the name of her husband that in view of the cardinal's order he would only meet Lieutenant de Fontayne on the promise of all concerned not to divulge the affair and would insist on fighting masked.

A reply came consenting to the terms and asking that De la Tour would name his seconds in order that the terms might be agreed upon. In reply to this word was sent that De la Tour, fearing a second might betray him to the prime minister, would trust no one with his interests. He would appear at dawn the next morning at the village of V., a few miles from Paris, ready to fight De Fontayne with rapiers. The reason given for this unusual course was that De la Tour was more afraid of losing his life by the cardinal's ax than De Fontayne's sword. An assent to this was received by Mme. de la Tour, and the preliminaries were closed.

The next morning Yvon, dressed in a suit of clothes belonging to her husband, was driven to V., arriving on the ground just as day was breaking. She found not only De Fontayne, but two seconds attending him.

"Pardon, monsieur," said one of these men, "but it is not usual for affairs like this to be fought out alone by the principals. Since you have no seconds, in case you disable Lieutenant de Fontayne it is expected that you will fight with me, and if you disable me you will have to fight my confrere."

Yvon, not daring to speak lest her voice betray her, simply nodded an assent. She wore her husband's rapier at her side and, drawing it, put herself in a position of defense.

Now, Mme. de la Tour, though she expected to meet skillful swordsmen, knew that if she showed her own proficiency she would give herself away, for these men all knew that De la Tour was a bungler. Being a woman, at first her nerve failed her, and she came very near losing her life by a single thrust of her adversary. The thought of her two innocent children, who would be rendered motherless if she did not control herself, made her perfectly cool, and, though she did not do what she was capable of doing, she did all that was necessary. She dreaded killing her adversary or even wounding him. She therefore sent his weapon flying in the air.

De Fontayne picked it up with the intention of continuing the fight, but his second interfered, claiming that it was not now his part to fight. By this time Yvon's nerve was as steady as a rock. She pinked her adversary, though unintentionally, then disarmed him. The third man she served as she had served the first. Then she strode away to her carriage without turning back for a glance at the three men, who stood looking at one another and her in astonishment.

But madame did not have a chance to mount the steps of the carriage the footman had let down for her. The sound of horses' hoofs was heard, and an officer, followed by a dozen horsemen, rode up.

"By order of his eminence the prime minister," he said, "I arrest you all and am ordered to conduct you to the Palais Cardinal."

The affair had got out at the barracks, some one wishing to curry favor with the man who ruled France having peached. Yvon was permitted to ride back to Paris in her carriage, the others on horseback, all surrounded by guards. At the Palais Cardinal they were obliged to wait several hours before the minister was ready to receive them; then when they were admitted to his presence by the thundercloud on his face they saw their doom. Yvon had worn her mask up to this moment. The cardinal saw it and said with icy sarcasm:

"Lieutenant de la Tour, you remind me of the ostrich, which hides his head in the sand to conceal its body. Your head will look better till I am through with it uncovered. You will oblige me by removing your mask."

"Pardon, your eminence," interposed De Fontayne, "I doubt if he is De la Tour. This one is a marvel with the rapier; De la Tour is an indifferent fencer. This one disarmed us all in turn."

"We have need of such men," said the cardinal to Yvon. "You would be better employed in my service. I would see you fence with Carrier. If you can disarm Carrier you will save your head. Unmask!"

"If I unmask, your eminence, I cannot fight."

"Not fight unmasked! Well, then, wait till you have fought."

Carrier was one of those picked men the cardinal kept about him for protection and a marvel with the rapier. The two were given foils, this being a great advantage to Yvon, who dreaded bloodshed. For awhile it was a drawn game between the two, but finally, by one of those quick moves that only a gift nerve, so to speak, can accomplish, Yvon placed the button of her foil against her adversary's heart.

"Enough!" cried the cardinal. "Victor, unmask!"

Yvon took off her face covering, and in doing so her hair, which had in so many frays became unloosened, fell on her shoulders.

"A woman!" exclaimed Richelieu, astonished.

"A woman, your excellency," she replied. "The wife of Lieutenant de la Tour."

"Your husband! Where is he?"

"Shut up in our country place. I tricked him. Knowing of your eminence's edict against men fighting duels, I determined to fight in his place. Surely the order does not apply to women."

"You are very shrewd," said his eminence dryly.

At this point an attendant announced to the cardinal that Lieutenant de la Tour was without and begged to be admitted. The request was granted, and De la Tour, very hot and very red and very angry, entered. He looked at everybody, finally fixing his eyes on his wife. Then he turned to the cardinal.

"I have heard, your eminence, that my wife has been fighting in my stead and that the party was brought here by your eminence's order. Meanwhile I have been shut up like a dog and have just escaped."

"Your wife has saved you first from a better swordsman and second from my headsman." Then turning to Yvon: "Mme. de la Tour, her majesty has graciously appointed you her mistress of the robes. By your pluck and skill you have saved every one of these men, including your husband, from the block."

Then Yvon approached her husband shamefacedly, hung her head and glanced up at him appealingly. He half turned away from her with folded arms, tapping one arm with his fingers.

"You have made me ridiculous," he muttered.

"I would," interposed the cardinal, "that every woman in France would make her husband thus ridiculous. To show you and others that she has benefited you the king promotes you to be captain."

Then Jean embraced his wife.

It has been claimed that the reform the cardinal was so desirous of making really began from that time. Be that as it may, Captain and Mme. de la Tour always stood high in his eminence's favor.

$666 FOR WATER IN MILK

Farmer Swindled State Normal School and Was Caught.

Restore $666 illegally taken from a normal school or face a term of 284 years in jail were the alternatives that met Jacob Brutzman, a Monroe county farmer residing near the Stroudsburg Normal school, a short time ago, says the Lock Haven Express. Oliver D. Schoch, special agent of the pure food department, was visiting the school and Professor Kemp, the principal, told him that he had reason to suspect that the milk furnished the school was not what it purported to be.

Schoch had some samples examined and they were all found to be watered. Brutzman was sent for and accused of watering his milk, and he broke down and confessed that he had been adding water to the milk for the past 18 months without detection. After some parleying he offered to make restitution.

A calculation was made and it was figured out that Brutzman had defrauded the state institution out of $666. When told he was liable for the full amount and a fine of $25 in each case and in addition a prison sentence which would make the aggregate 284 years behind the bars, Brutzman weakened and at once refunded the $666. He said he would dispose of his farm stock and handle no more milk. The department let him go free.

Predicts Lots of Game.

A Harrisburg despatch says that Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the state game commission, who has just returned from a visit to north-western and northern tier counties, declares that unless there should be severe conditions there will be abundance of game of all kinds in Pennsylvania this year.

"I have visited the western and central sections of the state several times this summer and I am just home from the northwest and the counties of Bradford, Tioga, Wyoming, Sullivan and Luzerne," said he, "and I have been struck by the plentitude of game. The quail are more abundant than they have been for a long time and this I attribute to the fact that the farmers and sportsmen are taking more care of them than formerly. The quail are being fed in hard winters and other game is watched. The vigilance with which the law prohibiting unnaturalized foreigners from carrying firearms may also have something to do with it.

"The hot weather this summer has not interfered with game and, as there were serious forest fires in only a few counties, the game has been able to propagate."

A very genial and welcome caller at "The Republican office on Friday of last week was Mrs. G. W. Etters, of Philadelphia, who had been enjoying a delightful visit with old Centre County friends. It will be recalled that some time ago Mrs. Etters was quite ill in the Germantown hospital, Philadelphia. Whether or not it was her trip and visit among old friends and old scenes we will not venture to say, but her appearance while here certainly suggested that she had fully recovered her health. Her visit was cut rather short by the receipt of word that her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Nace, was ill in one of the Philadelphia hospitals. The message was not an urgent one, but Mrs. Etters thought it over for a few minutes and then concluded that she was ready to return home. She departed for Philadelphia on Saturday. HAD BIG PICNIC

Annual Outing of Business Men at Hecla Park Largely Attended.

The annual picnic of the business men of Centre and Clinton counties, held at Hecla Park on Tuesday, was largely attended. The weather was ideal for the occasion and upward of 6000 persons were assembled in the park.

Instead of having the Repasz band, from Williamsport, as has been the custom for several years, the Pennsylvania Railroad band, from Tyrone, was engaged for this year's picnic, the boys making the trip in a special train. Before going to the park the band gave a delightful concert in Bellefonte.

The baseball games proved to be interesting features. In the morning a team from Bellefonte defeated the Lock Haven club, 9—5. In the afternoon the Philipsburg and Tyrone teams clashed, Tyrone winning out, 5—3.

In the shooting match Clinton County's team won over the Centre County team by a score of 95 to 90. The individual scores of the opposing teams follow:

Mix-up Over Horse Deal.

Sheriff Hurley was out on Sunday evening, armed with a warrant for the arrest of a man named as Morgan Richards, of Jersey Shore, and although he scoured the country in the vicinity of State College he failed to find him. Richards is wanted as a figure in a mix-up resulting from a horse deal on Saturday at Julian. The warrant was issued on information made by Mrs. James Andrews, a daughter of Jack Nason. Counsel for Mrs. Andrews stated that her husband and Richards became engaged in a horse deal and that a horse in which she was a part owner was traded to Richards for a pair of horses, including bridles, nets, etc. Mrs. Andrews, when she learned of the deal, put a halter on her horse and started to lead it away. Claiming that the horse was his and that he had secured it through the trade, Richards took it and went away. On the road he met Mr. Nason, to whom he admitted that perhaps Andrews was not in shape to handle a horse deal at the time of the trade and that he would call everything off and take his two horses back for the one. Instead of doing that, counsel for Mrs. Andrews stated, Richards returned to the barn and carried off the bridles, nets, etc, and disappeared with the Andrews horse. Sheriff Hurley said that it was a very much mixed up affair and that he knew nothing about the matter other than that he had the warrant to serve.

Winslow Family Reunion.

The fourth annual reunion of the Winslow family will be held in Punxsutawney, on Thursday, September 7. These reunions have hitherto been held at Benezette, where a large number of the family reside; but quite as many live in and about Punxsutawney.

While all who bear the name are invited, this reunion is confined for the most part to the descendants of Carpenter Winslow, who brought his family to this region from the coast of Maine about ninety-six years ago, and whose grave is in the old cemetery in Punxsutawney, where he died in 1827. Until this emigration the family had kept close to the New England coast from the time of the landing of the Mayflower.

Carpenter Winslow's descendants, with their wives and husbands through four or five generations, number at least three hundred, largely scattered through Jefferson, Elk, Forest, Clearfield and Clinton counties, and the reunion is expected to be well attended this year.

THINK THIS OVER.

You say you can make more from your surplus than a life insurance policy will make for you.

How much comfort of mind will your "increased earnings" bring you when you are ill and face the question of your family's needs?

Mental worry and illness combined speeds death.

Mental ease contributes to longevity.

A Royal Union policy is the greatest balm in the world for that feeling of uncertainty about your family's future if you are no longer here to provide for them, and for the time when age will impair your activity. No policy is better secured or yields a better return to its holder than the ones issued by the Royal Union.
